

Dayanand Medical College & Hospital Ludhiana

July 24, 2008

North Zone Thesis writing workshop held at DMCH

Thesis writing is an integral part of post graduation. Since this is the first encounter of PG's (MD/MS) with a project, most PG students face a lot of difficulty in giving a final shape to their thesis even after research data has been generated. DMCH has been helping the students in this endeavor organizing thesis-writing workshops in the past. This year, the cover has been extended to the whole of North Zone by organizing North Zone workshop on thesis writing on 24th June, 2008.

Approximately 100 delegates from medical colleges of Punjab, Haryana, Himachal Pradesh & Delhi attended the workshop.

Principal of DMCH-Dr Daljit Singh inaugurated the workshop and gave an overview and general guidelines for compiling a thesis. This was followed by discussion on various aspects of thesis.

Dean Academics-Dr. S.C. Chopra gave a practical demonstration and tips for the use of Office 2007 and to simplify the laborious thesis writing exercise.

Dr Sanjeev Uppal detailed the guidelines for writing the introduction and review of literature of thesis. Dr Sandeep Kaushal and Dr Bharti Mahajan gave tips to write brief aims and objectives and enough details of material and methods to ensure replication of results by other researchers. Dr R.K. Soni discussed methods to translate the results and use of statistical methods.

Dr. Kanchan Gupta gave tips to write Bibliography and various legal aspects related to thesis writing. Dr Anju Grewal emphasized the important things to be remembered for preparing master chart and use of perfomas to record data. Dr Gautam Ahluwalia gave tips to extract a paper for publication purposes from the thesis.

The workshop feedback showed that the participants were highly enlightened for their thesis writing with a better knowledge and practical tips.